Local Men Held On Arson Charge

Arrests Follow Investigation By State Fire Marshal

Charles Crosnoe and G. Cook Under Bond for Hearing.

WOMAN ARRESTED

Mrs. Verna Wiltse Also Placed Under Bond of $3,000.

Following practically three months investigation by the State Fire Marshal's office into a fire which destroyed the Wiltse home and furnishings on East Second street here last May 1, Charley Crosnoe and G. Cook, both well known here, and Mrs. Verna Wiltse who owned the property, have been arrested and are at liberty under bond of $3,000 each pending preliminary hearing before Justice of the Peace Huntley here Friday morning, August 9, on a charge of arson.

The arrests were made by Sheriff McRae and Deputy Porter on warrants sworn out by John Carter, State Fire Marshal, under whose direction the investigation had been made. An insurance policy of $5,700 was voided on the house and furniture and the company issuing the policy is resisting payment, it is said, because of the alleged incendiary origin of the blaze.

Neither Cook nor Crosnoe nor Mrs. Wiltse have made any statement other than to say they are free of guilt in connection with the charge and at the proper time will have no difficulty in establishing their innocence.

Traffic Officers Lay Down the Law

Regulations for Festival Day Will Be Strictly Enforced.

Traffic during the Festival this year will be handled by Company "A," local unit of the Arkansas National Guard, as it was last year. The regulations prescribed by the committee are given here with and Major Newton and Captain Boyett will instruct guardsmen to see that they are followed to the letter.

"Last year," Major Newton said today, "the only trouble we experienced was with certain people here who insisted upon doing as they pleased and had to be forced to abide the rules. Visitors gave us no trouble at all, being uniformly courteous in following suggestions. Hope people can do much toward making the Festival a success by observing the regulations, made imperative by the volume of traffic in the city on that day."

"The parallel parking rules on certain streets covered by the parade is necessitated by the width of the floats, they being unable to get through if the usual style of parking is followed."

No Parking Streets

No parking allowed during the day on Main and Elm, between Third and Front streets and on Front between Main and Elm.

No Left Turn Streets

No left turns on Main and Elm between Front and Third and on Front at Main and Elm.

Parallel Parking Streets

Parallel parking only will be permitted on Third street between Main and Walnut, on Walnut between Second and Third and on Second from Walnut east, on Elm from Third to Fifth and on Fifth from Elm to Washington.

Miss Geraldine Busby, of Redland Township, who succeeds Queen Leora to reign for a year in Watermelon Land.

Will Copyright Photo of Melon

Congressman Parks Moves To Protect Publicity for Land of Melons.

The famous picture of a negro boy standing beside last year's champion watermelon—144 3-4 pounds—will be copyrighted in the name of Hope and Hempstead county, it was announced today.

Congressman Tilman B. Parks telegraphed Roy Anderson, president of Hope Chamber of Commerce, that he had applied for a copyright on the picture in the name of the Chamber of Commerce. Mr. Parks' action was in line with the sentiment expressed by local business men, grocers and The Star last week.

The demand for adequate protection of publicity material used by the annual Festivals, has been growing ever since it was learned that a South Texas produce man was using the Hope picture to advertise Texas watermelons. All advertising material in connection with the marketing of bona fide Hempstead county watermelons will probably be copyrighted in the future, it is believed.

L. S. Bittick, Standard Oil agent—received from Fred Luck.

"Number Two" (Thirteen Changes)
Unreported since last week, when a Mr. Lee, of Patmos, obtained it.

The Star's No. 1 Dollar passed its team-mate in total circulation today, changing hands three times since yesterday's report. No. 1 has gone through the hands of 14 persons, as against 13 for No. 2.

The No. 2 dollar is apparently out of circulation, nothing having been heard from it since a Mr. Lee of Patmos, carried it out of the city last week.

No. 1 got off to a bad start, has been trailing the No. 2 dollar until today. It spent several days at Bodcaw, Nevada county, while No. 2 was busy circulating in Hope. No. 2 then disappeared, and today No. 1 caught up with it in total circulation.

At the end of this week the dollars will be retired from circulation and The Star will publish its analysis of their various moves.

Welcome To Hempstead County!

WRITTEN a few hours before the start of the fourth annual Watermelon Festival, this is addressed to the thousands of visitors who never fail to help Hope and Hempstead county make this the largest one-day event of the year in Arkansas.

The Festival doesn't belong to the city—but to Hempstead county and Arkansas. All that Hope has done is to set the stage. The drama belongs to the people and soil of Southwest Arkansas.

No explanation is needed of a harvest festival. It has had its place among all people in all ages. When success has crowned the long and difficult process of breaking ground, planting, cultivating and finally harvesting the crop, there is reason for thanksgiving. All the harvests of the world are open to the winds of chance. The problems of industry, secluded and sheltered, are child's play compared to the task of the grower in his open field.

We are proud of the Watermelon Festival. It has given to Arkansas a premier event only rivalled in other years by the Apple Blossom Festival, at Rogers. The weather was never kind to that celebration, observed in April, and since 1927 the Hope Festival has stood almost alone as a nationally-famous glorification of an Arkansas crop.

Behind the Festival and its holiday trappings one will be glad to know that there is a very real development. Hempstead county watermelons have become the pace-makers for Arkansas, and Arkansas now leads the world—in both size and flavor.

This year's crop came on the market a week early and sold for the highest price in history. The price was still above $1.50 per hundred when Hope had shipped better than 100 carloads.

A most successful season for the growers draws attention to what is taking place in Southern agriculture today. John Durst, of the Forrest City Times-Herald, has a philosophy which is worth quoting: "What Arkansas needs is less cotton and a new kind of breakfast food. The world has to buy cotton, but it wants luxuries and is willing to pay for them." Champion watermelons are Hempstead county's gift to Arkansas—a new "breakfast food," if you please.

At any rate, they are commanding an excellent price, and the people of this section get a brand new thrill as each succeeding year and Festival show what keen interest the rest of the world has in Hempstead county and its most famous product.

A Real Hero

IT is always good to read about genuine bravery. Lieutenant Jovice, of the Yugoslavian infantry, was lecturing his platoon on hand grenades recently. He exhibited a grenade, pointed to the firing pin, and explained that the grenade would explode just five seconds after the pin was pulled out.

And just at that moment through some mischance, the pin fell out!

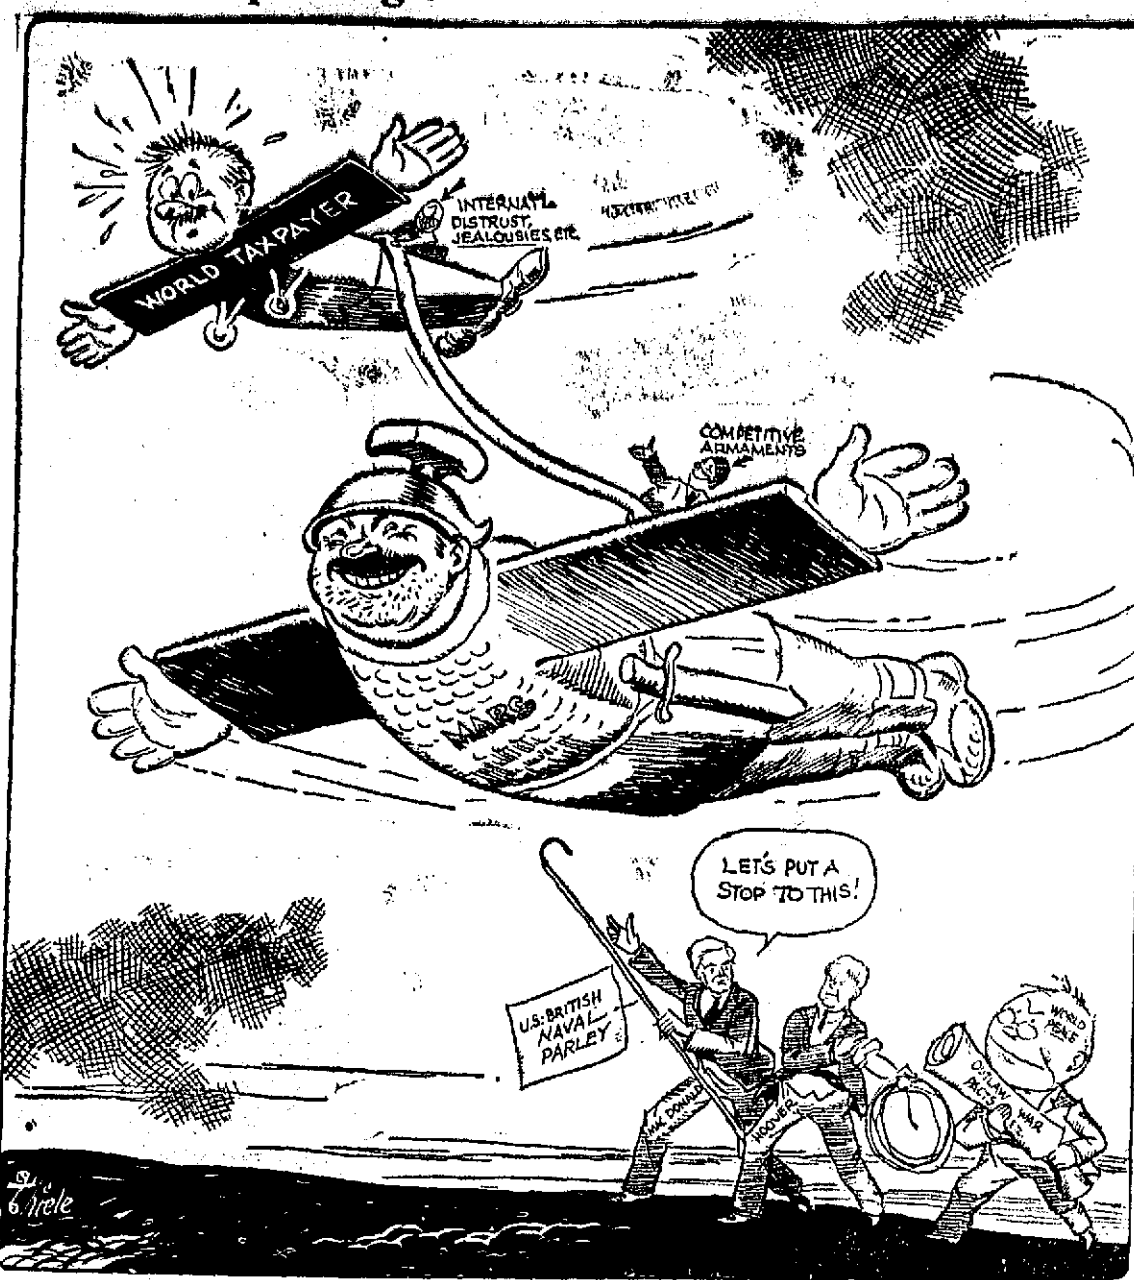

The room was full of soldiers. Many would be killed if the grenade exploded there. Out of the window was a courtyard, also full of men. To throw it out the window would kill some of them. And Lieutenant Jovice had just five seconds to think.

Quickly he ordered his men to lie flat. Then he ran to a corner and hugged the grenade tightly to his side. The five seconds passed, and the grenade exploded.

Lieutenant Jovice's right arm was torn off—but no one else was hurt.

It will be a long time before you read of a braver man than he.

Speaking of Endurance Records—!

BARBS

Once there was a town in the United States so old-fashioned, remote, slow and small that no one there ever held an endurance flying record.

A breed of wingless chickens has been developed in Kansas. Some day scientists will turn their attention to something really worth while and may produce a chicken without a neck.

Governor Roosevelt says he is not a candidate for President. That's the first intimation we've had, anyway that the Democrats might nominate again.

A writer says that all you have to have to get into Washington society is a suit of evening clothes. And, if Mrs. Gann is there, perhaps you'd better bring your own chair.

The home of a recluse was searched in Wisconsin and $6500 was found. He must have been a non-union recluse to have so little as that around.

An Arkansas heifer died after it choked on a roll of bills the farmer had lost in the pasture. Maybe the farmer shouldn't be relieved, after all—think of the poor heifers!

Little Pickford seems to want her name embalmed in history. Her third husband is an undertaker.

Daddy 'Just Dropped From Sight'

These seven children of Mrs. Florence James formed a regular "step-ladder" family as they and their mother boarded a train in Denver, Colo., to return to their home, Wash., home after their daddy "just slipped out of sight." Mrs. James, awaiting arrival of an eighth baby, told her story to Mrs. E. B. Swift, right, of the Travelers' Aid, who aided her and, left to right, Betty Lorraine, Laura May, Richard, Florence, Elizabeth, Earle and Robert James, in getting home.

NOW IS THE TIME

You can now buy a FARMALL tractor, and break up the Johnson Grass sod at a time when you can kill it, and be ready for another year, and PROSPERITY.

TERMS—until after cotton is gathered in 1931! Can you afford to do without a FARMALL, and the help it will be to you?

WARNING

Let Us Prevent An Epidemic Of Malaria This Summer

Four Out of Five Have This Disease. Nash's Tonic Will Make of You, the Fifth!

Chills and fever, and Malaria which causes them, is on the increase, and the summer hasn't even started! This Malaria has been due to the fact that the people who were bitten by mosquitoes last fall have harbored and carried the Malaria germs in their bodies all winter long. When they are bitten this year, the germs in their body will be transferred to other people who are bitten, and there is every indication of a veritable epidemic of Malaria this summer.

You may have Malaria now and don't know it. NASH'S CHILL & LIVER TONIC will relieve you of it before it develops into chills and fever and other serious results. If you haven't Malaria, NASH'S TONIC will act as a preventive by putting your system in good condition.

MALARIA IS MAN'S ENEMY

If you are bitten by a mosquito the chances are Malaria germs have been deposited in your system. If you have a normal amount of red corpuscles, and your tissues are properly functioning with a good healthy blood stream coursing through your body, you can offset those germs. But, if you are in any way run down, and the chances are that you are after the winter, and such an unusually and disagreeable wet spring, those Malaria germs will rapidly increase, and you will soon be another of the South's thousands of victims of this terrible disease—man's enemy one of the big causes of the South's so-called laziness and lack of ambition in the Southland.

NASH'S IS MALARIA'S ENEMY

Fortunately there are enemies of Malaria. NASH'S CHILL & LIVER TONIC routes the germs by not only killing them, but puts the system in such good condition that Nature wards off their attacks, cleans out the system, and gives one a new lease on life. NASH'S TONIC, therefore, not only causes a definite relief from Malaria, but makes the body able to withstand continued attacks, and thereby serves as a preventive. It is likewise, an excellent purgative and tonic. Therefore, one does not have to be sick to take it.

THE FIGHT IS ON. ARE YOU INCLUDED? So the fight is on, with four out of five people having malaria. The chances are only one out of five that you haven't it, or four chances out of five against you. Join in this fight to relieve yourself of Malaria, even though you may not think you have the germs in your body, or to prepare yourself not to have Malaria this summer, when it is expected to be prevalent to such a great degree.

Join in the fight and let NASH'S TONIC be an aid against the enemy of man—Malaria.

This tonic sells for only 50c per bottle, and yet may be worth $50 and even more to you, if it would prevent you from being sick or cause you to lose that feeling you now have of being peevish, tired out, constipated, bilious, depressed, or otherwise feel so "bum."

GUARANTEED! Every druggist is authorized to refund the entire purchase price on each and every bottle. Over 18,000 bottles are sold each month, and there has been practically no dissatisfaction at all. If you are not satisfied even after your dose or two, you may have your change price refunded.

For sale in Hope by all good Drug Stores.

the Call that Burnt the Beefsteak

When Phil Allen came home from work he found his wife in the kitchen, regarding the blackened ruins of a steak with tears in her eyes.

"And the company'll be here any minute!" she wailed, looking up at him despairingly.

"Why honey!" Allen sympathized, "how did it happen?" Carefully, Mrs. Allen lifted the smoking skillet and started toward the sink.

"I can't," she observed bitterly, "I simply can't go clear to the front of the house to answer the telephone, and watch a meal at the same time. I just didn't know I'd left the fire turned up so high!"

Allen hurriedly picked up his hat.

"Tomorrow I'll order an 'extension' telephone put in back here," he said. "And—don't worry, dear. The butcher shop's still open."

Telephones where you need them save time, patience, housewifely strength.

Few know that one or two additional instruments cost considerably less than the single telephone they now have!

By a wisely-placed "extension" or two, and perhaps a re-arrangement of the equipment you already have, an expert telephone man can often double the convenience of your telephone service.

"TWIN BEDS" RULE IN THIS MOVIE MARRIAGE

Patsy Ruth Miller is the bride of Jack Mulhall.

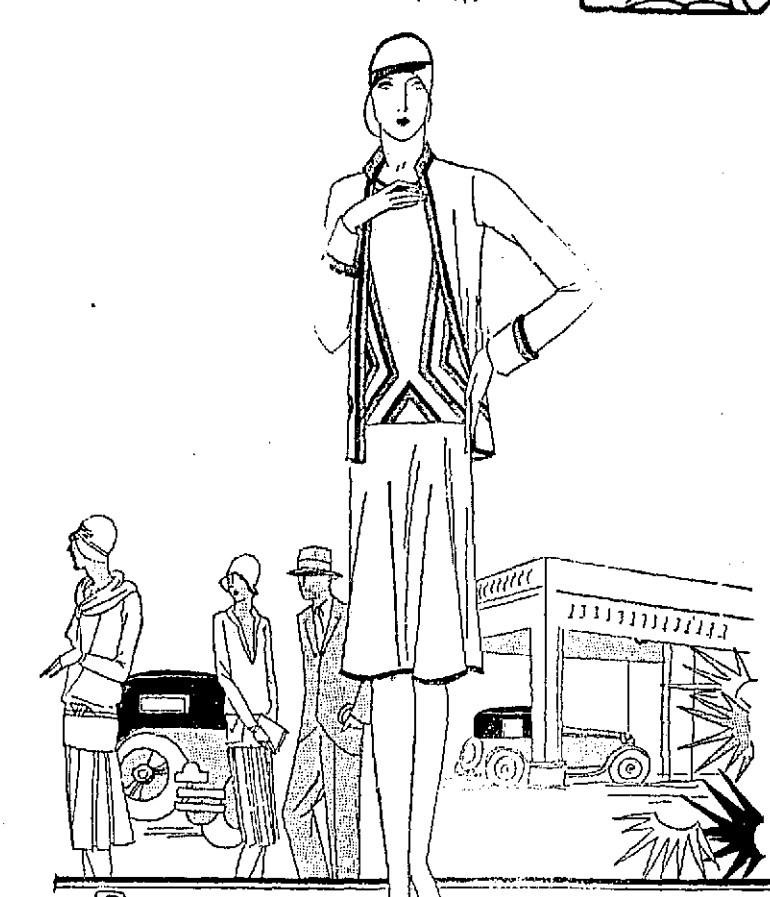

But it's only for a picture—"Twin Beds" to be exact. This hilarious farce, adapted from the stage play of that name by Margaret Mayo and Salisbury Field, comes to the Saenger theatre Wednesday and will usher in Laugh day there. It is a First National-Vitaphone 100 per cent talking picture. Mulhall is separated from his bride on his wedding night. Then the fun begins. Eddie Gribbon, Armand Kalz, Gertrude Astor, Alice Lake, Knute Erickson, Ben Hendricks, Jr., Zaza Pitts and many others join in the fun making.

"Twin Beds" is recommended highly for the blues.

WEARING TIGHTS UPSET POISE OF BELLE BENNETT AND FOOLED JOHN STAHL

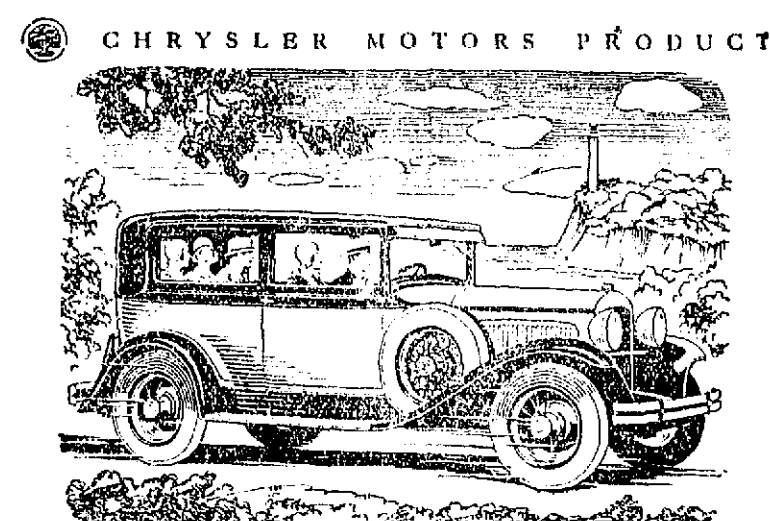

Can you imagine Belle Bennett in tights? John M. Stahl, who is the Stahl of Tiffany-Stahl, producers of "Molly and Me" showing at the New Grand Thursday and Friday couldn't either, for when asked how he liked the costume Miss Bennett was to wear in the stage sequences of the picture he replied, "It's great buy why wasn't it worn by Miss Bennett in the test?"

Beneath the tinsel costume, the riotous ringlets of golden hair, the stary eyes he had not recognized the Belle Bennett of "The Power of Silence," "The Devil's Skipper," "Wild Geese," or even the Belle Bennett of real life.

The RAINING TALENT

THIS HAS HAPPEND

Molly Burnham, misquoted by reporters, is in all kinds of trouble. With the premier of her startling play, "The Death of Delphine Darlow," Molly has acquired national fame. Newspaper people, clamoring for news, decided that she is in love with Red Flynn, a police court reporter and co-author of her play. They wrote a story to that effect, anticipating an early marriage.

As a matter of fact, Molly is in love with Red—but with Jack Wells, a poor young architect, Jack reads the stories that presupposed Red to be the lucky man, and is furiously hurt and angry. Molly, before she has seen the papers, telephones to ask him to take her to luncheon. He retorts that she has made a fool of him long enough, and hangs up the receiver.

Then Red Flynn telephones from Boston. Red Flynn has seen the papers, too, and he is also upset. He begs Molly to be discreet, and says he is writing her. "Don't do anything," he begs, "until you've heard from me."

Now Go On With the Story

CHAPTER XXV

Red had written from his desk in the press room at the court house, on the typewriter that had his capital M. And he had written hurriedly, and in excitement. Red always used dashes when he was tearing off a good story. And then it had to be re-written in the office they couldn't use a story of —s in the paper. The moment Molly glanced at it, she knew that he was in one of his excitable moods.

"Dear Molly," he began.

"Maybe you think I acted pretty strange over the phone just now—but that's because you haven't any idea of what I'm up against. I've been cray about you ever since you strolled in the office that day, and knocked Wharton for a row of goals—I guess you know, too, that people are always falling in love with you. It isn't fair to be as beautiful as you are—what I'm trying to say is I fell like a load of bricks the minute I laid eyes on you—but you know, Molly I never made love to you."

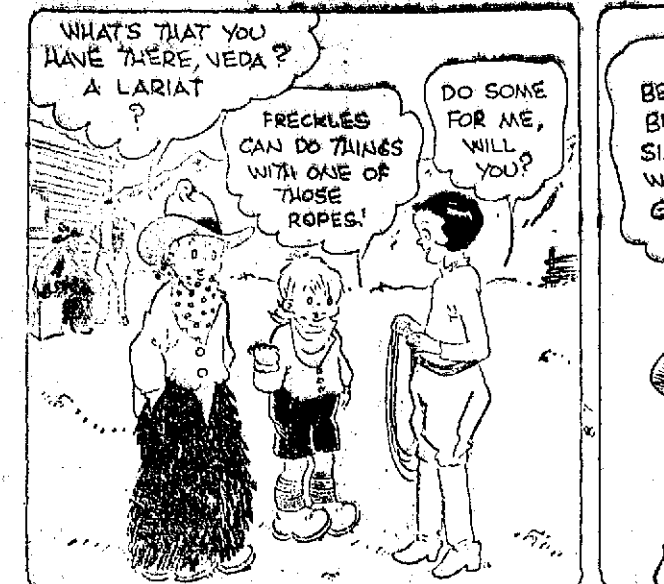

"You told me about Jack Wells—and how you were more or less engaged. And perhaps you think that's why I never did—but I'm not that kind of a chivalrous bird, Molly. If I'd been in a position to try to make you love me, it wouldn't have made any difference that some other man thought I had first rights."

"Ever since I've known you, I've fought with my love. Every time you ever touched my hand, I'd want to take you in my arms—and hold you tight—and kiss you."

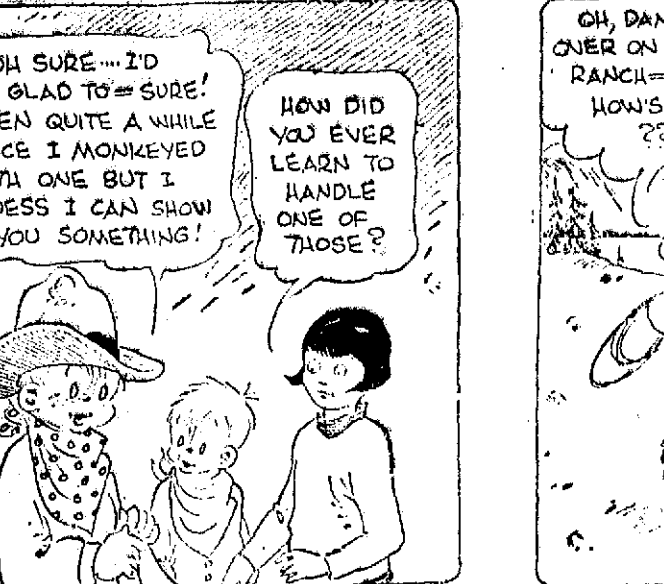

"Remember the night you asked me if I had my sweetheart's picture in the back of my watch? And I said 'Yes'—and showed it to you? And you said 'Why, it's your mother. Red.'"

"Well, I suppose I might have told you then that my mother is an invalid—that she hasn't been out of a wheel chair hardly since I was born—only I didn't want you to think I was looking for sympathy, or anything like that. If I was to get married, my mother would just about die, Molly. My father died when I was in high school, and then I started taking care of mother. I guess being an invalid is enough to make any woman jealous—anyhow there's no use talking about it. When a

MOLLY."

She was not, she decided, in any frame of mind to write the tactful answer that Red's letter warranted. She must think of tender, understanding things to say.

Now she would dash off, instead a letter to Jack. Tomorrow she would write Red.

She pulled out a little gilded chair, and sat at the Marie Antoinette desk.

"Dear Jack," she wrote, and sat for a moment, biting the end of her pen, considering.

"Direct, and to the point," she decided. "And a little reticent, because it doesn't pay to be too eager. . . . Dear Jack, I'm sorry you wouldn't listen to me, or let me explain. The stories in the paper were entirely without foundation. I love you as much as I ever did. I'm going to Boston, and you can reach me there, if you wish."

She read it over, and concluded that it was both dignified and discreet. Now he could interpret the degree of her love in whatever ed to see her, he could reach her in Boston.

She had made a mistake, she decided, in urging and begging. She was acting like an idiot to telephone, when he made it so evident that he did not want to see her. And it would be absolutely crazy to stay any longer in New York, in the vain hope that he would come to her. Let him do the pursuing for a change!

She sealed the letter, and thumped it defiantly with her fist. She wondered why she felt so much like crying. Why she felt so lonely, when all the papers said she was the cleverest, prettiest girl in New York. Why it was that Red was eating his heart out for her in Boston. And Jack wouldn't even take her to luncheon in New York. Why her mother was provincial. And her father hen-pecked. And Rita sick. And Ruth dead. And the world all wrong with the author of the hit of Broadway.

"Oh dear!" she sighed. . . . and then the telephone rang.

"Miss Burnham?" an eager voice inquired. "Oh, Miss Burnham, my name is Mary Austin, and I'm on the Herald. I know you said you wouldn't see any more reporters today. But this is my first assignment, and you've no idea how much it means to me. I'm afraid I'll be fired if I fall down on it."

Molly laughed. She had used the same plea herself, and she knew other girls who had. It was, in fact, a venerable scheme, and often used by old-timers.

"I'd hate to get you fired," she answered. "Come up."

When Miss Austin presented herself, Molly was not surprised to see a self-possessed young woman of unquestionable experience.

"I knew it!" she declared, laughing good naturedly. "I've pulled the same one myself."

Miss Austin smiled undismayed. "What's the low-down on this Flynn person?" she demanded, and have you a picture of prince charming?"

Her gaze swept the dressing table.

"They say he looks like Lindbergh," she volunteered. "Blond and lanky, I suppose. That's the way I like 'em too. Who was it said long-legged men make the best lovers?"

Molly shrugged.

"I don't know. It sounds like tabloid philosophy. . . . Listen, Miss Austin, you'll be doing me a favor if you kill that engagement story. It should never have been published."

Molly dropped her voice confidentially. "Will you deny it for me?"

"Why surely, if you want me to, so you're off romance?"

There was a gasp of insolence about the girl from the Herald.

"You know," she declared, "I've always thought newspaper women had a nerve to marry. Seeing the indignantly. "I didn't say anything of the kind."

"But you've renounced marriage?"

"I didn't say that either. I'm leaving tomorrow for Boston, to attend my class reunion. And then I'm going to Italy, because I'm dying to see Venice, and eat a lot of spaghetti. I adore Italian jewelry, and Roman history, and I'm going to have aw wonderful time. I'll be gone for some weeks, and I don't know what I'll tackle when I get back. I've been asked to do a talkie movie and write a book, and a few other things. But everything will have to wait. I'm going to get together what money I can—I guess I can get an advance on royalties. And I'm sailing straight for Naples."

"Lucky girl!" applauded Miss Austin. "And thanks for seeing me, Miss Burnham. I'll just write a couple of sticks, and kill that engagement story."

A few hours later she telephoned from her office.

"Mary Austin again. Say, there are a couple aviators missing. Not wishing them any hard luck, I reckoned you'd be glad to know you've lost your place on the front page. Lindy's gone looking for them, and we'll be leading with that in the morning."

The New York press thereafter regulated Molly to an inside page. But Boston welcomed her home with headlines. And when she arrived at college, for commencement, the students met her at the station with a brass band.

She and Rita went to the garden party together. And, as they sipped self, Molly was not surprised to see a self-possessed young woman of unquestionable experience.

"I knew it!" she declared, laughing good naturedly. "I've pulled the same one myself."

Miss Austin smiled undismayed. "What's the low-down on this Flynn person?" she demanded, and have you a picture of prince charming?"

HOKY SLIDES

By Henry L. Farrell

Would You Say?

A great admirer of Bill McKinnis, we don't know whether to rejoice or commiserate with him over his return from exile. It must be said to his credit that he is a game guy. He took his rap that fall and didn't say a word. His reward for winning the pennant last year—or as his bosses might put it, his punishment for losing four straight games in the world series—was banishment to the Rochester farm of the St. Louis club.

He took it like a soldier and wished Billy Southworth well when he was moved in from Rochester to succeed him.

Southworth stepped into a tough spot and McKinnis is coming back into a tougher spot. The champion Cards are floundering over the league and McKinnis faces the danger of being burned in the chair if he doesn't get the job up there.

Can Soldier Also? Southworth, in going back to Rochester, proved himself a good soldier. But he always has been that kind of a fellow.

Last winter when he was appointed manager of the Cards he was told that he was a sucker for taking the job and that it was the toughest spot in baseball. Bill just laughed.

But Boy Makes Good

One of the important men in the drive of the Philadelphia Athletics for the pennant is Bill Dooly, a pitcher who was almost out of the training camp. Bill Dooly of the Philadelphia Athletics told the story. Here it is: The biggest surprise that has come to Connie Mack's pennant hunt

DID YOU KNOW THAT—

The experts are beginning to question that Mel Ott, the boy wonder of the Jints, is only 20 years old—And they seem to think that Little Waver is older than he claims—And that Jim Fox is no infant—And that Jack Quinn doesn't give his right arm—And that Charley Grimm is an old man and wasn't 16 when he broke into probaseball—Bill Carey and the Garden millionaires didn't get to first base when they hung the threat on the New York comish that they would put Schmelling and Sharkey on elsewhere—The comish said—"Three months dark for the Garden if you do"—But Wild Bill Carey might ask some judge if the comish can do that—Frank Hunter soldiered like a good soldier when the tennis association replaced him with George Lott on the Davis Cup team—After he had spent all that dough getting over there—But he's got plenty of dough.

For this season, by Connie's own admission, is Pitcher Bill Shores, who remains to star in the role of fairy prince where he was expected a few short weeks ago to start a one-way journey almost any moment to where the cows are moaning and the potato bugs are cooing.

For Bill Shores, the sensational rookie whose five wins and other victories saved just about represent the gap that keeps this pennant race from going to Stamese, was not picked to be another country boy who would make good in the big city.

Connie Mack couldn't "see" Shores down in the training camp in the spring. It was kind of an optical illusion, for Bill was so stout that when he stood on the main stem of Fort Myers he hit the rest of the town.

But that was the reason Connie couldn't see him. He was too rubicund to enter into Mr. Mack's picture of what a pennant ensemble should look like.

If you'd have told the tall tutor that Shores was a fairy prince in disguise he'd probably have thought you were standing in the sun too much.

But you live and learn even at Connie's age. The peerless pilot exercised his usual patience with Shores. It pained him to look at Bill's corpulence, to think of all that weight crushing down the poor little clovers in Shibe park, but he delayed the signing of the walking papers.

Today Mr. Mack is glad he was n't hasty. He has changed his mind about Shores' figure. You can get philosophical about almost anything.

So it isn't hard for Connie to see the bright side of a round rookie who seems destined to provide the Athletics with the extra pitching the Mackmen need to win their first pennant in 15 years.

The Passing of a World's Champion

Boxing Card Thursday Night Promises Fans Plenty of Action

Matlock and Leavelle in Main Event Will Decide Which Is Better Man of the Pair—Points Decision Not Wanted By Either.

The boxing card arranged for Festival night, to be held under auspices of the local post of the American Legion, gives fans a promise of plenty of action in the open air at Fair Park, where a ring, ringside seats and bleachers have been erected, with special wires to the ring for lighting. Promoter Robins announces reserve seats to the number of 500, many already sold, and bleachers seats for at least 1000 more.

Most interesting, of course, is the bout carded between Jack Matlock and "Tex" Leavelle, the big boys to go over the 12-hurdle route. These two have met before—and neither is satisfied with the results attained. Neither, they an-

Edison and Ford, Just Kidding

Two famous cronies, Thomas A. Edison and Henry Ford, were having a famous time when the camera caught them at Chautauqua, N. Y., the other day. And it must have been a memorable event for little Charles Darrow when he sat on the lap of Ford (left) and for little Charles Bestor and Nancy Miller, who were privileged to be so near to Edison (right). Standing are Arthur E. Bestor (left) president of the Chautauqua Institution, and Adolph S. Ochs, publisher of the New York Times. The occasion was a ceremony honoring the memory of Lewis Miller, co-founder of the Chautauqua Institute, who first inaugurated a program of combining summer recreation and education.

NEW CEMENT PLANT WILL BEGIN PRODUCTION

Model City Going Up for Employees

$2,500,000 Installation Beyond Saratoga Reveals Biggest Machines In This Section of Arkansas

For years the white dirt which crops out in the hills around Saratoga, 20 miles west of Hope, puzzled men. It wasn't sand, for in wet weather it had a peculiar consistency. A similar formation had been known for a long time on the Hope-Nashville road, between Washington and Ozan, where huge sea-shells gave mute testimony to the geological story that once upon a time the Gulf of Mexico covered this section of North America.

More than a year ago the Okay Cement company, a giant member of the Portland Cement association sent engineers from its home office in Denver, Col., and its nearest operating unit, the Oklahoma Portland Cement company at Ada, Okla., into Arkansas to locate a new cement-making plant.

Found Best Limestone
They went into the foothills of the Ozarks near Fort Smith. They looked at rocks and soils in the hills around Hot Springs. But in the Hope-Nashville section of Southwest Arkansas they found 100 years' supply of what is said to be the finest limestone for cement-making purposes in America.

Two miles from Saratoga they bought 800 acres of land, and last fall began the construction of a $2,500,000 plant and colony. This new city, where before there was nothing but high, rolling hills, they called Okay, after their product, O. K. cement.

The plant is now approaching completion. The first unit got into production July 15, and other units are starting at 10-day intervals, until the entire plant will be turning out finished cement about September 1.

The coming of this biggest industrial plant to Southwest Arkansas has been widely heralded, transforming an agricultural country into a unit of one of the major industries of America.

Okay Model City
Not only has the pay-roll and activity of the construction job at Okay been felt throughout all the southwestern counties, but the Arkansas Portland Cement company has assigned to itself the job of constructing a model city—Okay. Streets have been laid off, a score of pretty new homes built, and soon there will be gardens and flowers. Okay has become one of the show places of Southwest Arkansas, and not a day goes by that tourists don't drive out of their way to visit the little city beyond Saratoga.

Huge Rock Crushers
The Okay plant has some vast machines utterly new to Arkansas, notably the big rock crushers which start the process of converting native limestone into finished cement. There are two of them, each weighing 190,000 pounds.

From the crushers the powdered stone is carried by chain-up elevators to the storage room, which is capable of handling 400 barrels per hour. From the storage bins the limestone is passed to the "stirry" or agitation tanks—of which there are seven, each 20 feet in diameter and 40 feet high. Here the limestone is mixed with gypsum, water and other materials to make what is known as "clinker."

The clinker is then cooked in a kiln lying horizontally on steel and concrete columns—one of the biggest industrial units in the world. This kiln is 11 1/2 feet in diameter and 300 feet long. It is lined with fire brick capable of standing up to 2,700 degrees Fahrenheit, and once the kiln is put into operation it must be kept fired and running day and night in which the cement-making business is similar to steel, where a blast furnace often runs continuously for its entire life.

225-Foot Smokestack
In connection with the kiln there is the highest structure in Southwest Arkansas, a reinforced concrete smokestack standing 225 feet above the ground. It is 30 feet in diameter at the base and 12 feet at the top.

The Okay plant's capacity will be about 2,000 barrels of cement daily, three barrels of cement requiring a ton of limestone. With this as a starter it is expected the capacity of the plant will be doubled within the next year, the Arkansas Portland Cement company having ing already announced plans for early construction of a second unit equal in size to the first.

The plant will employ 80 men regularly, in two 12-hour shifts; but a total of 324 workers have been engaged since mid-winter in construction work.

A Patented Bag
One of the novelties peculiar to the cement manufacturing business is the method of storing and bagging the finished product. The Okay plant is completing 20 reinforced concrete silos for storage purposes, the finished cement being accumulated here and kept in bulk until ready for the bags. The silos themselves are immense, standing 95 ft. in the air, with a diameter of 30 feet.

The silos are the last point at which the cement is held before leaving the plant. As fast as orders are received the cement is drawn off from the big tanks and blown into ready-tied bags. This is made possible by a patented flap in the bottom seam of the bag, the invention of which made a fortune for the man who devised it.

While the bag is empty this flap is open, but as the cement is blown in and the bag fills up, the back pressure closes the flap, sealing the bag, which is then ready for shipment. The entire process of withdrawal from the silos and bagging for shipment is incredibly rapid, and allows for a minimum amount of spoilage from dampness or other causes.

Experts Correct Map of the World

Distorted Continents and Seas Revised By U. S. Geographers.

So few places remain unexplored that most people take for granted that modern maps give an accurate picture of the world. Yet nearly everyone has a distorted idea of the sizes of most countries and their geographical relation to each other.

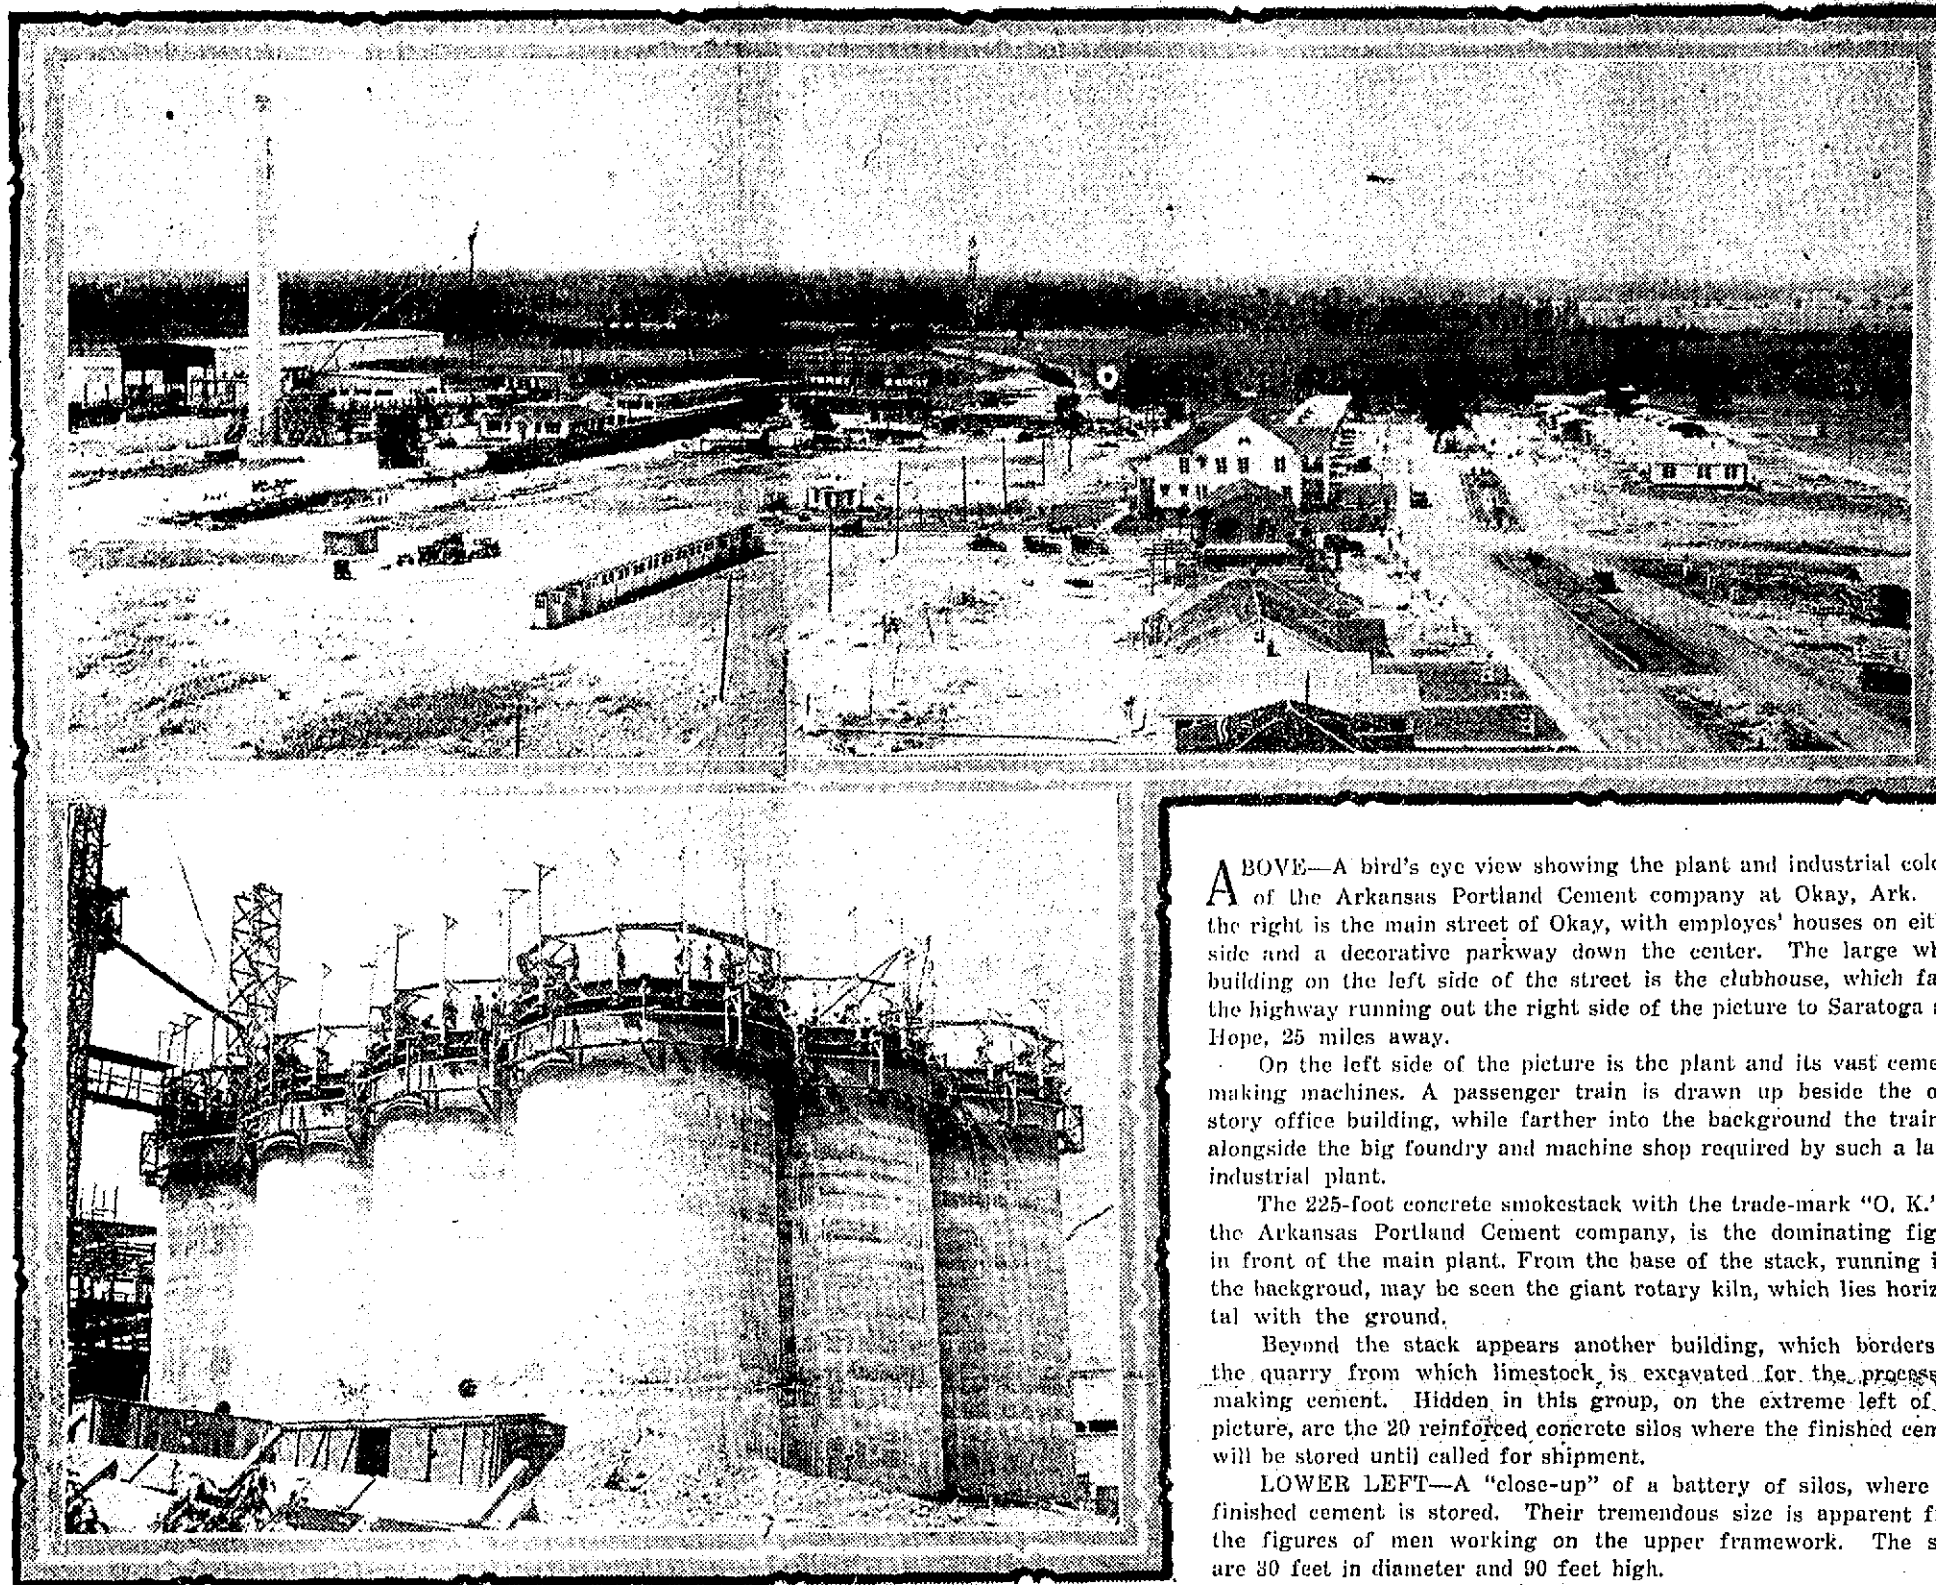

The blame lies in the commonly accepted map for the world which children still study. This map was designed by Gerardus Mercator in 1598, and is known as the Mercator projection, or system of showing the world on a flat surface. It gives a grossly inaccurate picture.

For instance, the United States appears nearly twice as large as Brazil, although in reality it is smaller. North America is shown as about twice as large as South America, though they are approximately equal in size. Greenland is shown as being larger than Australia, and yet Australia is more than three times as large as Greenland!

The trouble with the Mercator map is that it was designed as a chart for sailors rather than as an accurate picture of the world.

As a result of five years work, experts of the U. S. Department of Commerce have just completed a correctly proportioned flat map of true areas and distances. Every square inch on the new map stands for exactly the same number of square miles as any other square inch. Distances along the lines parallel to the equator are accurate and true to scale. So also are distances on each vertical meridian that extends through the center of a continent. There is some slight distortion in distances elsewhere on the map, but it is vastly less than on the Mercator projection.

Geographers who have examined the new map have predicted that it will take the place of the old map for all things except navigation.

ABOVE—A bird's eye view showing the plant and industrial colony of the Arkansas Portland Cement company at Okay, Ark. To the right is the main street of Okay, with employees' houses on either side and a decorative parkway down the center. The large white building on the left side of the street is the clubhouse, which faces the highway running out the right side of the picture to Saratoga and Hope, 25 miles away.

On the left side of the picture is the plant and its vast cement-making machines. A passenger train is drawn up beside the one-story office building, while farther into the background the train is alongside the big foundry and machine shop required by such a large industrial plant.

The 225-foot concrete smokestack with the trade-mark "O. K." of the Arkansas Portland Cement company, is the dominating figure in front of the main plant. From the base of the stack, running into the background, may be seen the giant rotary kiln, which lies horizontal with the ground.

Beyond the stack appears another building, which borders on the quarry from which limestone is excavated for the process of making cement. Hidden in this group, on the extreme left of the picture, are the 20 reinforced concrete silos where the finished cement will be stored until called for shipment.

LOWER LEFT—A "close-up" of a battery of silos, where the finished cement is stored. Their tremendous size is apparent from the figures of men working on the upper framework. The silos are 30 feet in diameter and 90 feet high.

Bandits Play Hob With Divorce Suit

Victim of Hold-Up Is Made Victim of Circumstances.

DECATUR, Ill., Aug. 7.—Two bandits recently came to the aid of the wife of a man they had held up and were so successful in their efforts that they blocked an attempt on the part of the husband to obtain a divorce.

Charles Parr was the husband who sought the divorce, which was opposed by his wife.

When it appeared that Parr might be successful in his effort to obtain marital freedom, it was recalled that he had been the victim of a holdup by two youths and that there had been some mention of a girl with him at the time.

So the two robbers, Loren Leigh and Oscar Burrows, now under probation following pleas of guilty to the holdup, were summoned and they told the court that a young woman was sitting with Parr in a parked car when they held him up. Court dismissed Parr's suit.

French Prison Stages Big "Financial" Row

PARIS Aug. 7.—(AP)—There are 126 bankers in the "financial row" of La Sante prison. Nearly all of them ran banks but often the banks did no real banking business.

Although most of them trimmed their customers as thoroughly as possible, none of them seems to have profited much. Usually, they in their turn were victims of hand-outs by the government or of their faith in their ability to guess what the stock market would do.

One of the first remedies agreed upon by parliament was the requirement of a clean legal record from those who wish to start banks. Exconvicts no longer need apply for charters.

"Says Churches Need Power"—Headline. And possibly the "power trust" will gobble up all the religion next.

July Busy Month for Game Wardens

Make 151 Arrests for Violations of the State Game Laws.

LITTLE ROCK, Aug. 7.—A total of 151 arrests were made by game and fish wardens in Arkansas in July and a total of 134 convictions as a result of the arrests were obtained. It was said at the office of Guy Amsler, secretary of the Game and Fish Commission, that in addition to those convicted there were eight or 10 cases in which one member of a party pleaded guilty and other members were released without having paid fines on their agreement to pay costs in their cases. A total of $2,037 in fines was collected.

Property confiscated by the wardens during the month included nine trammel nets, three minnow seines which were larger than permitted under the law, 11 large seines, five fish traps and 15 nets of various sorts.

Of the 23 wardens in the state, Walter Laceyfield was record man with 38 arrests and 38 convictions to his credit in July. Second high warden was J. O. McGrew, who made 25 arrests and obtained 25 convictions.

Students Sit In Sun To Hear Health Talk

BOSTON, Aug. 7.—(AP)—Preaching and practice go hand in hand at the Harvard Dental school here, where freshman students bask in the health-giving rays of the sun while they listen to lectures on hygiene.

Once a week Freshman students gather there for the required lecture on the care of the body and prevention of disease.

Watermelons—Past and Present

Jack Hyde, in Star of Hope, July 30, 1928.

Jefferson county, Florida, may have been the Genesis of the watermelon, but Hempstead county, Arkansas, claims to be the Revelation of the luscious growth!

A large field for argument has been opened up by Charles Leach, the veteran farmer-scientist of Monticello, Florida. He says the watermelon originated in that state somewhere near what is now Jefferson county. Furthermore, he asserts that Jefferson county grows the largest watermelons in the world.

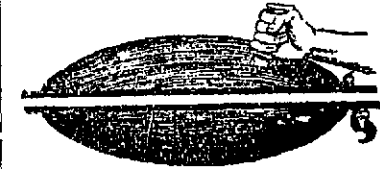

All of which is vehemently disputed by Arkansas growers, indisputably the producers of the largest, sweetest, juiciest, meatiest, smallest-grain melon this or any other world has ever known.

The sage of Monticello may be able to establish his first claim through default, for nobody has been able to find any record ante-dating that of Jean Ribault who led an expedition into northern Florida in 1562 and found, instead of the gold and silver he sought, something which has brought more genuine joy to mankind—the watermelon!

But as to the second proposition—well there is your argument, vehement, widespread. No true Georgian will ever admit that the original Tom Watson as grown in the Goober State isn't the best melon ever produced. Likewise every Oklahoman will testify in court or elsewhere that the Oklahoma, or improved variety of Tom Watson is the best thing that ever grew and ripened under a smiling sky and benign sun. And all these claims are so much puffery to the reverent Arkansawyer who knows that down here in southwestern Arkansas nature reserved her supreme gifts until she came around to watermelons.

It is true that finer melons never grew than those we see in the fields of memory, for they are warmed by the mellow glow of recollection and nourished with the generous fertility of reminiscence. The gentle winds of reverie, drifting across the vista of bright, vanished Yesterday's caress them, and the haunting dreams of childhood weave their magic spell around them, making them grow and ripen into melons beyond compare—fruition of every dream which ever brightened youth's pathway.

Never will there be, any other place, any melon so sweet and juicy, enrapturing—so full of heart! They will be relished most by those who were raised on a farm and know the mystery of telling when a melon is ripe by "thumping" it. Their fragrance will be enhanced if, perchance, they grew within the confines of a neighbor's prized "patch;" and if they were acquired some dark night, at imminent risk of discovery, then—ah, that is the kind of melon you long for once again! And find it only in Hope!

So it is rather a futile argument Mr. Leach has started. Give unto each his own—and doing that you will agree that the only place where bigger, better melons are grown than in Hempstead county will be a land surer and more enchanting than here—the Never-More land of childhood.

Radio Beacon Is Aviator's Guide

Invisible Band Guides "Blind" Fliers Safe To Field.

Reaching out 1,400 miles, a new radio beacon at Mitchell Field, N. Y., guides pilots who are flying "blind" in fog or darkness safely to the Army airport. During daylight, the beacon has a radius of 400 miles.

The pilot who approaches the beacon in thick weather is led by a band of wireless signals. As long as he stays in the center of this band the signals are strong, but if he wanders from his course and flies to one side or the other they become dim. By keeping in the center of this invisible beam he is guided straight to the landing field.

'Old Faithful' Has Been Long On Job

Oil Well Has Been Flowing Steadily for More Than 60 Years.

The "Old Faithful" among oil wells is located near Newhall, Calif. After nearly sixty years, it is still producing its four and a half barrels of oil each day. It was the first well sunk in California and led to the discovery of the rich field on the Pacific Coast. All of the other wells which were drilled around the first have long since dried up.

A Mexican deer hunter is said to have stumbled upon the site. In following a trail through Pico Canyon, now in Los Angeles county, he happened upon an ooze of black, sticky fluid, some of which he took to a mission settlement at San Fernando where it was recognized as petroleum. A few years later in 1870, a former resident of an oil-producing district in Pennsylvania brought a crude drilling outfit to the spot and sank the famous well which has been working constantly ever since.

Highway Patrol Is Proving Factor In Raising Revenues

Have Made Total of 2,800 Arrests Since Going On In April.

FORCE IS UNIFORMED

Number To Be Increased As More Highways Are Added To System.

The 14 members of the state highway patrol have made approximately 2,800 arrests since the patrol was given police power under an act of the 1929 legislature; approved an dmade effective March 30, it is announced at the offices of the State Highway Commission.

Most of those arrests, it was said, were made after April 15 when the patrolmen got their first uniforms. Their efforts previous to that time were directed largely to inspections for violation of state license laws.

Of the total arrests, Highway Department officials said approximately 98 per cent were for violations of the license laws, for overloading of trucks, or for other minor violations of the state traffic regulations. The remaining two per cent were for violations of criminal statutes, including reckless driving and drugging while intoxicated. Three arrests were made for driving while intoxicated and in each case V. A. Kleiber, chief clerk and auditor said, convictions were obtained.

In most of the cases where arrests were made for failure to comply with the license laws, persons arrested have been arraigned before justices of the peace, and their cases dismissed when proper licenses were obtained.

205,832 Licenses Issued
During the seven months of 1929 a total of 205,832 automobile licenses were issued by the Highway Department, compared with 190,322 during the first seven months of 1928. This is an increase of 15,510, and most of the increase is attributed by Mr. Kleiber to the fact that the Highway Department has had uniformed patrolmen on the state highways since April 15.

The 14 highway patrolmen are scattered throughout the state and each has a large territory and a large amount of road mileage to patrol. Two patrolmen have headquarters in Little Rock and patrol all the highways leading out of this city. Because of the many miles they have to cover, however, they cannot spend a great deal of time on any one highway, despite that the roads entering and leaving Little Rock are, perhaps, the most traveled of any in the state.

Mr. Kleiber said that no more patrolmen will be employed this year, but that as more highways are completed the force will be increased from year to year. He pointed out that while 100 patrolmen, for instance, perhaps would detect a greater number of violators of license laws, the returns from detection of such violations would not be nearly so great as the cost of maintaining the larger force.

Act 299 of 1929, which created the state highway patrol and gave its members police powers, provides that in addition to inspections for violations of state license and traffic laws, the patrolmen shall be "conservators of the peace, and as such shall have the powers possessed by policemen in cities and sheriffs in counties, except that the road patrolmen may exercise such powers anywhere in the state."

Magnets Prove Why Tire Dealers Grow Wealthy

ASHLAND, Mo., Aug. 7.—One hundred and twenty pounds of iron were picked up by magnets attached to a highway department truck between this place and Cedar City the last few days in an experiment by officials of the highway department.

Included in the junk were nails, wire, staples, screws, bolts and small parts of automobiles, pieces of a size likely to cause punctures to automobile tires.

The three magnets, two feet in diameter with a lifting power of 1,000 pounds, are attached to a truck within a few inches of the ground.

Lottie Pickford seems to want her name embalmed in history. Her third husband is an undertaker.

Lost Dogs, Kids or Jobs-----

Gene Hows, Panhandle Editor Who Panned Lindy and Mary, Will Help His Readers Find Any of Them, and All Texas Calls Him Friend

BY GILBERT SWAN
NEX Service Writer

AMARILLO, Tex., Aug. 6.—The proprietors of the office of "Ker" in the "Boob Oil Company" is more interested in the presence of subscribers than of silk hats.

And by reaching the man who comes driving into town in his glimmering, Gene Howe, otherwise "Old Tack," editor of the Amarillo Globe news, has succeeded in reaching the world.

He has dressed his words and ideas in the homespun of the people and thus, here in an embryonic metropolis of the prairie, has made himself an outstanding and picturesque figure in American journalism. His procedure is a combination of Abe Lincoln, Will Rogers, comic strip and human interest. His growth as a sort of plains idol is based on a shrewd knowledge of the individual and his reactions. He has made himself the sympathetic aide in any situation "where a feller needs a friend."

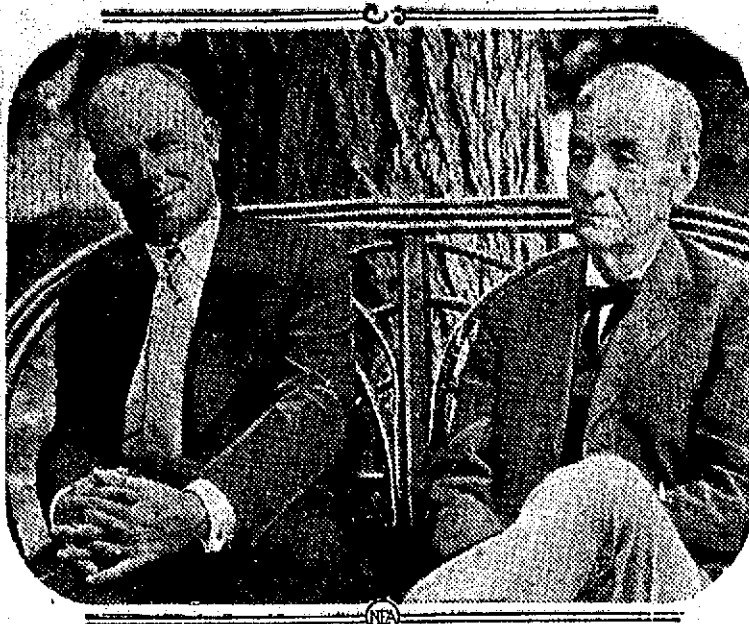

He Likes to Help
Perhaps even a shorter cut to an explanation of the national position he has achieved in this remote spot can be found in his own definition of a "perfect day."

"Not long ago, on a certain Thursday, I had a perfect day," he announced. "On that day I helped find six lost dogs, participated in the repair of four or five broken dolls, found a couple of fellows a job and patched up a couple of broken hearts so that all concerned left the office in charge of a minister."

Which may help to explain why, just a few months ago, a delegation of 100 school children was taken on a pilgrimage to his editorial shrine—after a journey of many miles from the winterlands. It may also help to explain why, upon the approach of a birthday, when he published in his daily column an item mentioning his fondness for chocolate cake, some 60 cakes came walking into his office fresh from the ovens.

A Statue of Ben Turpin
And when you learn that he then took the cakes to an orphanage he is particularly interested in, you will understand still better.

This newspaper shrine, by the way, is the usual fragile 10 by 12 coop on the outskirts of an editorial room. On his desk is a pertiicularly cross-eyed statuette of Ben Turpin. A drawing of this comic also heads his column. On a more personal desk is a framed copy of "The Cowboy's Prayer." One wall is covered with paintings of a duck country which, to all appearance, must be a "happy hunting ground," since birds are thicker than the famous plague of locusts.

If you don't believe the painting, he'll take you out a photo album showing camera shots of a duck country where ducks look like mosquitoes in a ersey swamp. On an opposite wall are a few cartoons and, over his chair, a photo of his father, Ed Howe, the famous Kansas editor, who has said of "Old Tack," "you're a better man than I am."

"Old Tack," by the way, grew out of an original signature which announced him as "the tactless Texan." His column had a habit of talking out of turn. It was humorously, but avidly, against bunk. He was well aware that two factors, above all others, are close to the individual man—his economic soundness and the things he and his family love. The individual man wants a job to support his family. He loves his children and his pets—his dogs and cats and birds. So do his children. A lost child is a lost dog is a family tragedy in any home. And so the whole countryside reports its lost dogs and children—and has come to report its lost loves and lost jobs. I am told that the column has cost up to $12,000 a year—helping men get jobs, helping take care of orphaned children, helping the poor and helping on one thing or another. Whenever a dog is lost Tack stands willing to add $2 to any reward that may be put up. Whenever a man loses his job, Tack helps him get another. His office is a floating stream of men in overalls and women in gingham aprons.

Admits His Defects

His humorous attacks on individuals and civic movements have often threatened animosities. But whatever the reply, he has faithfully printed it—adding that whatever comments may have been made about him they were probably right. He has admitted variously being "all wet" and a "sap" and a great many other things he doubtless isn't. He has kidded himself in the same column that he has poked fun at others and thus has softened the blow. He refers to his wife as "O. W." (old woman) and his child as "lollapalooza"—to say nothing of his mother-in-law.

His theory is that most readers pick up newspaper columns to be entertained and that fun is all too rare in this realm. That—and the appeal to the individual with a problem on his mind!

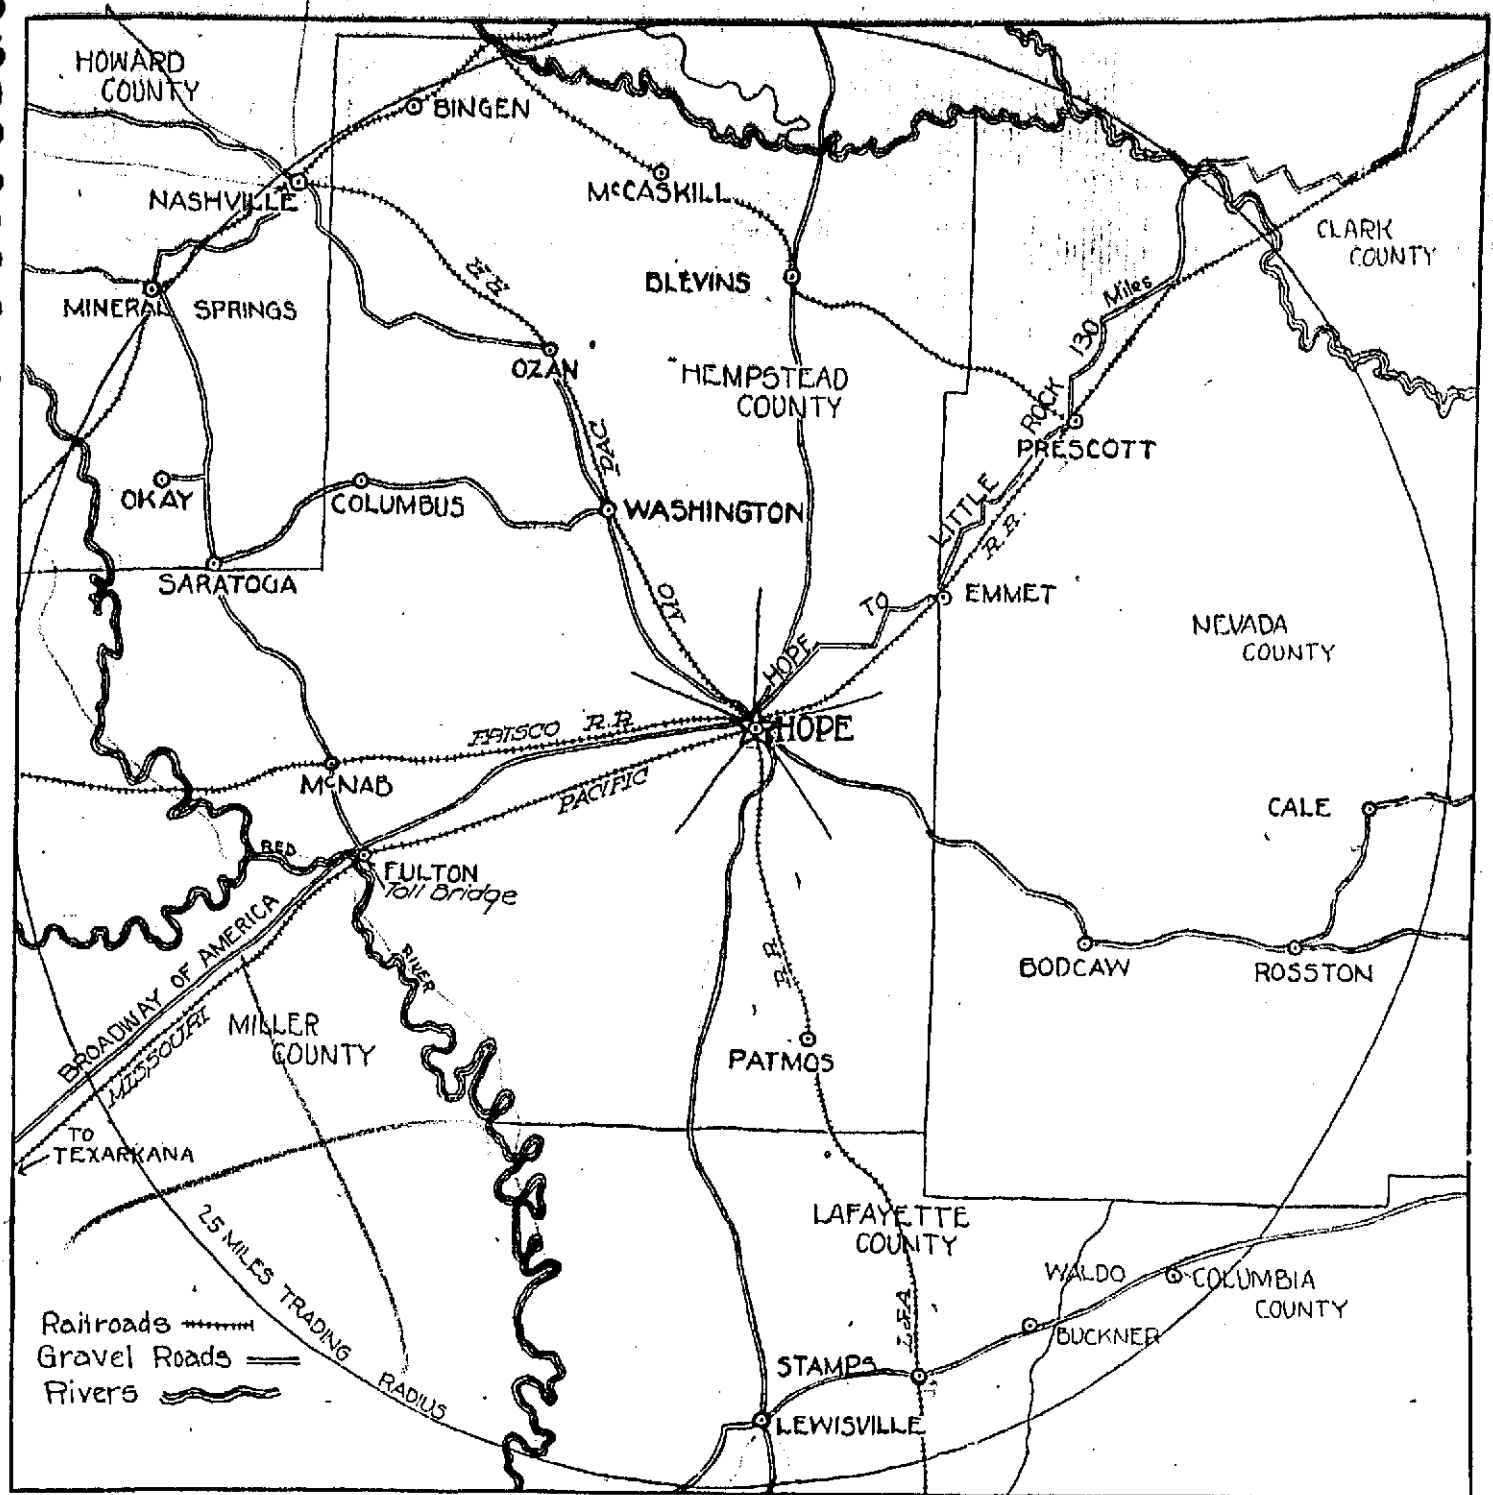

Yet he is not an "Old Tack" sort of person in appearance—to the contrary, he is quite urban, strapping and well groomed.

In addition to his Amarillo papers, he publishes The Globe, his father's former newspaper in Atchison, Kas., The Falls City (Neb.) Journal on which his father once worked as a printer, and is interested in other Texas papers.

An exchange tells of a swell party at which two physicians and four pharmacists were employed to write and fill prescriptions for the guests.

This includes all the towns in this map, with the exception of Waldo, and Buckner, figured for which have not yet been received. These towns are all within a radius of twenty-five miles of the city hall. Altho some of the rural routes extend five or ten miles beyond the towns within or on the circle. Hope often attracts farm produce, people seeking our mercantile and amusement facilities from a vastly greater distance. The Hope Star and the Weekly Hope Star has distribution in all of the towns, and on all of the routes on this map. This subscription list is growing rapidly.

Below is a list of the towns within a radius of twenty-five miles; and the number of patrons served by the post office in those towns:

ANCIENT TAX ON WINDOWS RECALLED BY MODERN "RE-DISCOVERY" OF SUNLIGHT

Amazing Levy Sharp Contrast To Present Sun Worship

BY levying one of the most astounding taxes in all history, the British government in 1697 began the transformation of thousands of bright, sunny homes into dark, cheerless, unhealthy dwellings.

Neither the tax on tea which spurred the American colonists to revolt or the even more infamous French tax on salt, one of the many high crimes of the Bourbons which eventually cost them their heads, offer a parallel for this strangest of all government exactions.

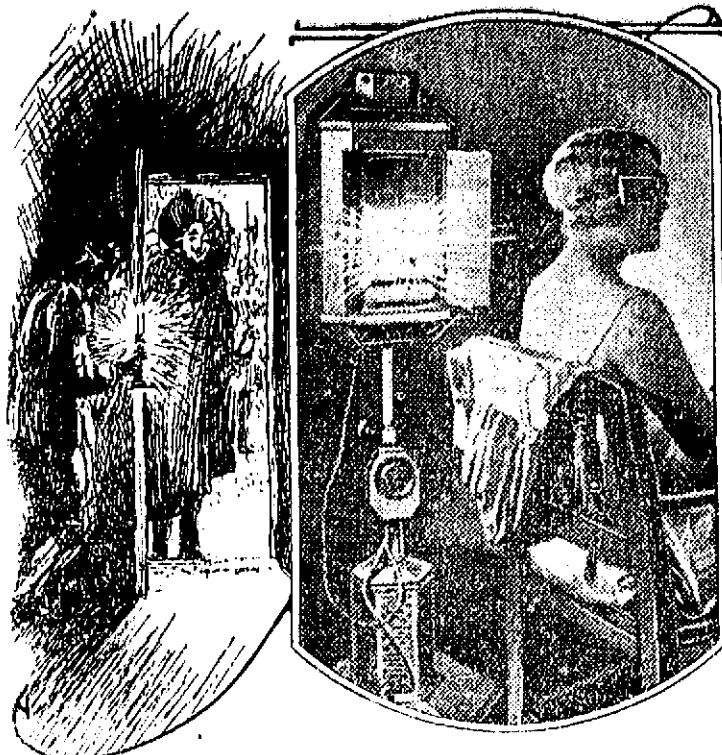

As hard as it is to conceive of a government levying what amounted virtually to a tax on sunshine, that is exactly what William the Third did. In order to make up a budget deficiency due to the recoinage of silver during his reign, he placed a high levy on every window in the British Isles. So many coins had been clipped or otherwise defaced and brought below standard weight that the exchequer found itself in an embarrassing position when the re-issue began. The historic "sunshine tax" resulted.

So hard did the burden fall on the middle classes that even today in many of the old English homes traces can be seen of endeavors to lighten the load by bricking up practically all windows, leaving the interiors unhealthy breeding places for germs, and depriving the family of the health giving rays of the sun.

Bootleg Windows

The effect of the tax was so great that, when it was finally repealed in 1851 there were only 275,000 houses in the entire British Isles with more than 10 windows.

A touch of modernism is given to accounts of the times by dark stories of "bootleg" windows—windows so constructed as to be concealed and made to look like a part of the house walls when the tax assessor appeared. Despite these bootleg efforts, however, the tax was successful and was six times increased before its final repeal in 1851.

Scientific investigation has shown sunshine to be so important to health that it would be impossible today for a government to levy any such tax. Moreover, science has discovered that windows do not entirely solve the problem of adequate sunshine, inasmuch as an important group of the sun's rays do not penetrate glass.

Close on this discovery came the perfection of lamps to provide artificially the sunshine which most persons' mode of living prevents them from getting naturally. Some of these lamps throw off special rays, such as the ultra-violet rays of the quartz mercury lamp. One of them, generating light from an electric arc plying between two carbons, throws off not only the ultra-violet rays but all of the other beneficial sun rays as well, including the visible and infra-red. This type, known as the "carbon arc" sunshine lamp, is coming more and more into favor as public health experts continue to stress the importance of adequate sunshine to health.

The sun worship of ancient civilizations has its counterpart in the present appreciation of its health giving qualities. The fact that its vital rays are necessary for the maintenance of health has found universal acceptance. In strong contrast, at any rate, is the present attitude with the action of the British Government in levying a tax on the most important single factor in the world's health.

Hope Pays Tribute To Watermelons and General Diversified Farming Thursday, August 8th.

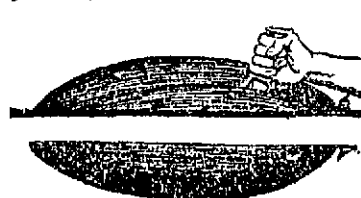

ILLUSTRATION OF THE LARGEST WATERMELON PATCH IN HEMPSTEAD COUNTY

Diversified Crops Insure The Farmers Independence!

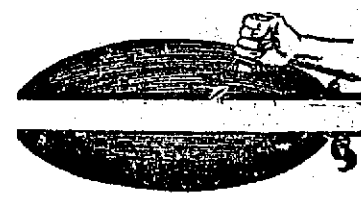

ONE OF THE MANY THINGS WHICH ILLUSTRATES THE INCREASING INDEPENDENCE OF OUR FARMERS UPON COTTON FOR THEIR MAJOR CASH CROP, IS THE UNUSUALLY SUCCESSFUL EXPERIENCE IN THE RAISING AND MARKETING OF WATERMELONS.

ON THURSDAY, AUGUST 8th, Hope celebrates rebellion of the uncertainties of farm prosperity by depending on the moods of King Cotton; and pays tribute to her new ruler, the Queen of the Watermelon Festival. This is the fourth annual event of its kind; and the festivities are growing in importance and in size each year. Hope entertains Thursday. Hope has invited all Arkansas, and all this section of the great Southwest, to help her celebrate. And, just as in the past 3 years, all Arkansas and great sections of the Southwest will be represented.

WELCOME!!

To The Watermelon Festival

ENORMOUS THROUNGS OF PEOPLE ARE COMING! NOT ONLY TO BASK IN THE SUNLIGHT OF HOPE HOSPITALITY—BUT TO WORSHIP AT THAT SHRINE WHICH REPRESENTS A PEOPLE WHO HAVE ARISEN FROM THE BONDAGE OF THE ONE CROP SYSTEM.

Hope is in the midst of a harvest of Watermelons. And to advertise the superior flavor of watermelons grown in this section—EVERYONE who comes this way—will be served—ABSOLUTELY FREE—with generous portions of these famous watermelons, even the passengers and crews of the trains will be participants of this great feast.

HOPE WATERMELONS HAVE GAINED FAME THROUGHOUT THE U. S. A. ASSURING OUR FARMERS READY MARKET AND FANCY PRICES

The Watermelon is only one of the things which is rapidly making of this section of Arkansas a vast empire of wealth, based upon the only true basis of prosperity—land, and the things it will produce. The County Agents reports show Hempstead County Farmers realized $750,000 from their truck crops against an estimated crop of $1,500,000 cotton crop. An astounding comparison, especially when we realize that Dairying holds greater possibilities for this section than either Cotton or Trucking.

The Policy Of The Arkansas Bank and Trust Company

—has always been dedicated to any movement which hopes of less dependence upon cotton, alone; and upon a more stable basis of prosperity founded upon farm diversification which ultimately must create that ideal state of happiness and wealth for OUR PEOPLE.

PRISON BURNS AS CONVICTS RIOT

Burning of the Auburn, N. Y., prison in the spectacular mutiny of 1700 convicts, who set fire to a half-dozen buildings in a sensational break for freedom, is strikingly portrayed in this exclusive Star-NEA Service aerial photo. Firemen are shown on the high penitentiary walls vainly fighting the blaze, while guards inside the prison quadrangle battled inmates who had armed themselves with guns and ammunition from the prison arsenal. Fire destroyed the furniture plant, the cane shop, the prison kitchen, the machine shop, the State shop and the finger-print office, with its Bertillon records. Two convicts were killed and more than twenty men wounded in the fighting. Four prisoners escaped.

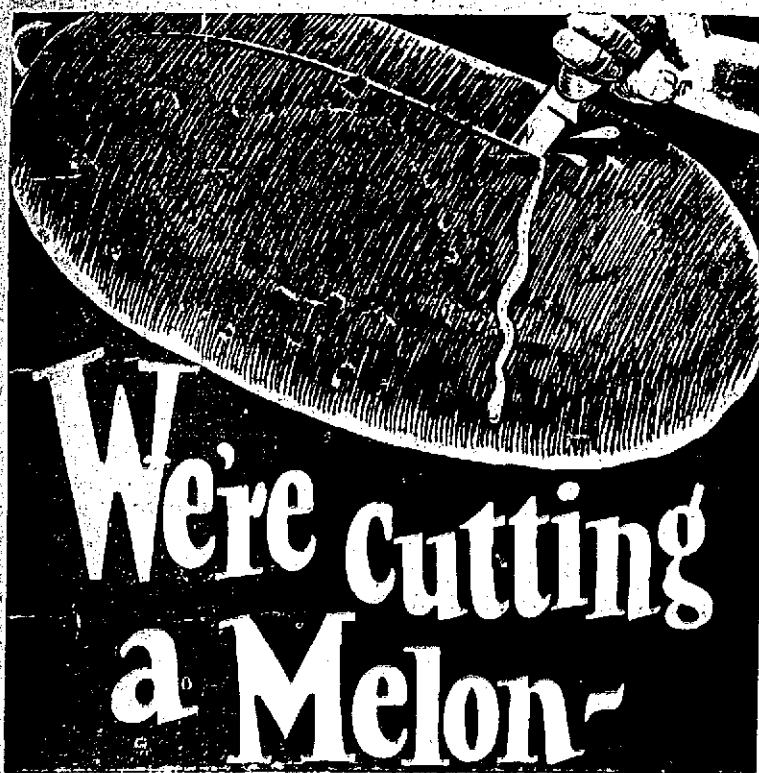

Faces 127-Year Prison Sentence

Blame for the sensational $5,000,000 failure of the Clarke Brothers' private bank in New York was taken upon himself by James Rae Clarke, senior member of the firm. The arrow indicates him in the picture above as he pleaded guilty to indictments growing out of the bank's crash, making him liable to a maximum prison sentence of 127 years. He absolved others of the company, including two brothers, of all responsibility for the failure.

Shining Talent

First Section

It's dreadful the way mothers and daughters drift apart. I know more about this mother stuff than you do, Molly. I know what it means to grow old, and see my daughter turn away from me, as you've turned from your mother, I swear I'd rather die than chance it."

"But I didn't turn away from her!" protested Molly. "You know perfectly well, Rita Melnotte, that is she were a normal parent, she'd be proud of me, instead of despising me."

Rita smiled. "Parents are old-fashioned," she declared. "You'd call me modern, wouldn't you? Well, I'd be sorry if Rita, when she was 10, should turn her adolescent attention to crime. You were pretty young, you know, when you got through college. I can understand the way your mother feels."

"Oh, all right," interrupted Molly. "Have it your own way. I'm a bad ungrateful child. And my poor mother is simply pining for a little love and attention. Well, I'll ask her to go abroad with me then. I'll tell her I'd rather go with her than anyone. And we'll see what she has to say."

"Fine!" approved Rita. "Of course she'll go, and she'll be tickled to death."

But Rita was wrong. A few days later Mrs. Burnham's reply to Molly's warm invitation arrived. "Dear Daughter," she wrote. "You are a generous girl, and I regret that I cannot accept your kind invitation. It would, however, be impossible for me to share the monetary gains of a vulgar play. "God's ways are strange, and past all understanding. For 30 years your father—a good, God-fearing man—has labored to provide life's necessities for his family. Yet we are still poor people. While, almost over night, our daughter acquires riches as though with a fairy wand. Oh my dear child, if you had only turned your talents in some other direction . . ."

There was more. But Molly scarcely read it. It was all alike. On Wednesday night the crowd in the office gave her a party, and a fitted traveling bag. Red made the presentation, and acted quite as though nothing had happened. His farewell kiss was so casual that Molly wondered if his gayety actually covered a breaking heart. She sailed from New York, and aboard, and countesses, and any number of dukes. They traveled with maids and various servants. And the women looked weary and tired, and wore countless jewels with supreme indifference.

The Sonte Blancamano was a floating palace, and presently Molly began to feel as if she had been born to a life of ease and luxury. Her bath was bigger than her own kitchenette and hall and bathroom put together. Her room had two beds, and a dressing table with a brought her fresh flowers every day, and waited upon her so assiduously that it was almost like having a maid of her own.

Molly spent the mornings in the gymnasium, because the instructor, who had volunteered to teach her fencing, was the best looking man on board.

"I'll use him in a story sometime," she decided.

After luncheon she wrote each day for two hours. Then it was tea-time, and tea on deck was served from silver services. Ices and pastries and champagne cup. Afterward she went to the movies, or played deck games.

At dinner time there were many rare dishes. Pheasants in gleaming panoply were carried into the dining room, with their heads high and their tails sweeping proudly. When their feathers were whisked away, their tender little bodies, grilled to perfection, reposed on toasted bread.

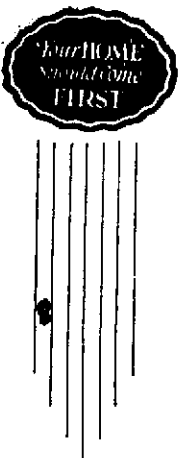

Molly sat alone in the dining room, but afterward, in the music room, she drank coffee while the others had liqueurs. And, because she was young and pretty and alone, she received a great deal of attention, and many invitations to dance in the grand Italian ballroom, or to stroll about the quiet white deck.

French Bid for Beauties To Boost Beach Crowds

Miss Nadine Picard (left) is considered the best dressed woman in France. Miss Lisle Goldarbeter of Austria (right), winner of the Galveston beauty award, is a drawing card at Vely. Miss Mad Brilliant (inset) is the official Miss Paris this year.

PARIS, Aug. 7. (AP)—Where the found, and the curious have been bathing beauties promenade, there on the go this year, will summer sensation hunters be. Because of their attraction, prize winning beauties are much sought by the beaches. Winners of the Galveston International contests top the list. They are in demand and if they do not travel luxuriously from one cool beach to another at the managements' expense it is because they have no business managers.

The directors of the colored contests, including the Azure, Emerald and Gold, consider one bona fide beauty good for an influx of motors. The gossip is that Austria's beautiful Miss Lisle Goldarbeter, who was selected for "Miss Universe" at Galveston's recent pageant of pulchritude, was "bid" by every French resort from Dinard to Deauville.

So far her only appearance has been at the safe and sane resort of Clichy, mecca for serious "euro-takers" and chronic sufferers. At Vichy they called out the brass band and the mayor to help welcome "Miss Universe" and the public came in droves to see the show.

Deauville, they say, bills last year's Miss France in the Galveston pageant, for an August appearance in formal beach costume.

Miss France is the plump and pretty Raymonde Allain, who broke her contract with a Paris music hall because it did not provide sufficient clothes for her act.

Miss Nadine Picard, actress who won the annual contest of Grand Prix week for the best turned out woman motorist, expects to make calls at several resorts in the course of the summer, impeccably clad and automobilized for each appearance.

Curly headed Miss Mad Brilliant, who is official Miss Paris this year, was asked to all the beaches but as she is a hard working music hall actress, she doesn't expect to accept any invitations.

Mistinguett has already browned her famous legs on the sands at Deauville and will be a frequent week-end caller, she says.

Jean Nash, now Mrs. Paul Dubonnet, is making a long stay at the Plage Plerie and takes her sun-baths in a backless bathing suit with abbreviated shorts, to which she adds a hip-length cardigan when she takes her board-walk constitutional.

Penney Remains Farmer— Chain Store Magnet Still Adheres to Earliest Occupation.

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—"The first money I ever made, I made by raising hogs," says J. C. Penney founder of the J. C. Penney Co. and leading figure in banking, publishing, dairying and agricultural interests in many sections of the country.

The extent to which he has adhered to his first instincts is shown in the fact that he now owns one of the greatest herds of purebred Guernsey cattle that has ever been exhibited at state fairs and dairy shows.

Included in the herd is Mixer May Princess, the Guernsey cow with a record of five calves in five years and a total production for the same period of 3489 pounds of butter and 6903 gallons of milk.

The herd also includes May Royal's Elberta, a heifer which won junior championship in every fair where she was shown last year.

In this day of avocations on the part of public-minded men whose vocations have made them into multi-millionaires Mr. Penney has chosen live stock breeding as his greatest diversion.

"I walk as far, when I inspect Emmaline Farm, as the average golfer walks when he plays eighteen holes," says Mr. Penney, "and I feel that I am walking to a better purpose." Close friends say that he admits playing an indifferent game of golf.

He has been a steady advocate of better sires in the breeding program of dairy farmers and says that the average dairyman is not getting nearly the returns from his dairy herds that he should achieve.

Several noted Guernsey dairy herds throughout the country have been developed from foundation stock supplied by Mr. Penney.

In the present attitude of business toward the farmer Mr. Penney's opinion is widely sought in matters pertaining to crop diversification, stock raising and distribution of farm products.

In addition to being widely known for his cattle, he is also recognized as one of the leading breeders of Hampshire sheep, having recently brought 40 of the finest animals in this breed from England.

Storage and marketing facilities in Kansas have been swamped by the quantities of wheat harvested there this season. Schoolyards, backyards and other fields have been used to pile up the surplus wheat crop. The U. S. ## Edison Congratulates His Protege

Mantle of the "wizard," Thomas A. Edison, left, may fall upon the shoulders of 16-year-old Wilbur Huston, right, of Seattle, Wash. The inventor is shown above congratulating the youth, son of an Episcopal bishop, whom a committee of five selected from among 49 boys who came to West Orange, N. J. to try out for the privilege of becoming Edison's protege. Young Huston will be sent to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, with all expenses paid, to specialize in chemical engineering. Upon graduation he will have the opportunity of entering the Edison laboratory.

Ocean Flyers in Reunion at Paris

They had a lot to talk about, did those French and American trans-Atlantic flyers, when they held the reunion pictured above at Le Bourget, France. Both crews took off from Old Orchard, Me., and both were forced down in Spain by lack of fuel. At the top you see Armand Lotti, left, of the French monoplane Yellow Bird, welcoming Roger Q. Williams, right, of the American plane Pathfinder, to France upon the Americans' from Rome. Lewis A. Yancey, Williams' co-pilot, is standing at Williams' right. The official welcome accorded to the American flyers is shown below. Left to right are Sidney Veit, Aeronautical Association representative; Yancey; Williams; Harold L. Williamson, assistant secretary of the American embassy; Lieut. Col. Alley, United States military attaché; and Commander Le Clair, naval attaché.
